MATT WRINN

BD'S MONGOLIAN BARBEQUE

The LoDo neighborhood is known as the place to be; it is the hub of the restaurant and bar scene downtown and Matt Wrinn of bd's mongolian barbeque is definitely a part of that scene. Matt has been the General Manager of the LoDo bd's mongolian barbeque for the past five years and he has been with the company for ten years, running several other bd's, including the one in Chicago. The owner of bd's mongolian barbeque, Billy Downs, decided to open a Colorado location ten years ago this November when he, a lover of the outdoors, came to Denver and discovered what an active city this is. Since opening in LoDo the restaurant has been thriving. The hot spot is a great place for first dates and dinner parties because of its interactive dining and reasonable price points.

Matt loves working in the LoDo area because of the "fun and entertaining" atmosphere of the neighborhood and he also feels that running a restaurant in Denver is in some ways easier because the city and organizations such as The LoDo District provide marketing opportunities for local businesses and help managers find answers to questions that help run their businesses effectively. Make sure to visit Matt and bd's where they are celebrating Oktoberfest celebration with new meat selections and great beer specials.
